ARMISTEAD TO PREPARE.

Says Chiefs at Washington on Mobilized the nation.

San Antonio is likely to become one of the largest mobilization points in the United States during the accomplishment of the War Department's plan of raising an army of two million men, according to Postmaster George D. Armistead, who returned from Washington Thursday night.
While there, he discussed with the chiefs of the department plans for supplying postoffice facilities for a mobilization camp of probably 100,- 000 men.

"There is a strong probability of San Antonio being made a mobilization point of chief importance," said Mr. Armistead, "and various plans are therefore being considered, such as the enlargement of the postoffice force to meet any emergency and the establishment of additional sub-stations, to place this postoffice in a position to handle the tremendous volume of mail resulting from a large mobilization. Of course, the number of men to be mobilized here depends upon the state of our border country, but at any rate San Antonio is being considered as one of the largest mobilization points with an idea of accommodating as many as 100,000 if needs be.

"The Postoffice Department," he continued, "is prepared to give this office whatever it needs to meet the situation. The establishment of an additional sub-station has been discussed, and with the stimulation of business resulting from the mobilization of a large number of men, anything else that is needed will be granted."
